THE RIVER BAILROAD. Bellaire Urged to Hurry up and Head off

We again call the attention of the people sion by the State Soldiers' reunion; of Bellaire and those living along the river on the Ohio side to the importance of prompt, determined action in relation to the construction of a railroad from this place along the river to Marietta. Active steps are being taken for the construction of a road down the Virginia side of the più this morning, General Sherman in the chair. The minutes were read and aproved. General Force, the Treasurer, read the annual report, showing the cash at the treasury about $7,000. The corresponding secretary's annual report mentened the deaths of Capt. Thomas S. Pendigus expectary's annual report mentened the deaths of Capt. Thomas S. Pendigus expectary's annual report mentened the deaths of Capt. Thomas S. then Beliare will lose even what she is now getting.

Hemmed in as Beliare is by rival towns and cities, and her local sources of supply and trade thus circumscribed, she cannot afford to allow any of these to be diverted by other channels to different markets. It is her true interest to see that these sources of supply and trade are increased rather than diminished, as her manufacturing population increases and enlarges her demands for farm products. Is there any way by which this can be so certainly and so cheaply done as by the construction of this River Railroad? With this road terminating at Beliaire, the Johnsons were independent, and had their price always a little above the buying price. For several of these clips the the Johnsons were offered over one dollar their way to this market, and with them would came as a mather of gourse the lattice of the 20 one of the control of the seven this control of the seven the s would come as a matter of course the trade and business of all that populous territory, if there was sufficient enterprise would come as a matter of gourse the straic and "Brainess of all that populous territory, if there was sufficient enterprised and business energy to deserve it. Belaire is not the only parky, however, that is interested in this matter. The merchants and business men of Powhattan, Clarington, Baresville, Matamoras, Grandview, and other towns on the north side of the Ohio river, as well as the coal men, farmers, and in short every other class living along the river are equally interested in this matter. A railroad will be constructed along this valley within a very short period—that one thing is as certain as fate. Its construction on the south side of the river will be a very serious disaster to every business and pecuniary interest on the north side of the river. The very moment the construction of this road on the Virginia side is a fixed fact, there will be a marked change in the order of development along the river. New business enterprises and new towns will spring up along its course, and the produce and trade of the north side will naturally find its way across the river because of the advantages of more reliable and more speedy communicated with the business markets of the country. Isyou want any evidence upon this point just look at the country between this and Pittaburgh. The North side of the river, because of the construction of the Cleveland and Pittaburgh road has developed into an almost unbroken continuance of towns, villages and manufacturing centres, while the South side remains almost stationary. So it will be between here and Marietta. The side that has the

New York, November 12.—The advance in stocks has been a continuous one alnost since the 1st of January, and all the predictions of a serious break have proved utter failures. What has become of the stocks? may well be asked. That the better class of securities, the dividend-paying shares, have gone into the tin boxes of investors is very apparent. They are not on the market, and an order sent into the board to buy can only be executed at an advance. The whole situation has vasely changed compared with a year ago. Government cut down the rate of interest to 4 per cent, and it is whispered will attempt a 3 per centrate, and the result has been that hundreds went out of United States bonds into securities that would pay a better return for the money invested.
